Final Report

Keeping Wildlife 'Wild & Alive' In Yukon Communities

Centre for Human-Wildlife Conflict Solutions

Submitted: March 15, 2015

To the Yukon Fish and Wildlife Enhancement Trust Fund:

First of all we'd like to thank you very much for your expert service and advice while our growing organization carried out numerous activities in 2014/15. Your support helped us to complete project commitments that were initially outlined in our 2014 proposal.

In addition to the financial summary provided in our final report, we are happy to offer an overview of how the community has been responding to both WildWise Yukon and our goals.

Interest is apparent from all sectors. As described in further detail below, we are continuing to strengthen new partnerships with both government and non-government agencies that want to highlight non-lethal solutions to human-wildlife conflict. Additionally, we have fostered new partnerships with Yukon College and the City of Whitehorse, where we have been invited to provide feedback and leadership in addressing human-wildlife conflict.

Social media is buzzing, with appreciative feedback coming in about the tips we've posted in response to bear and wolf activity in Yukon communities. The media has now started reaching out to WildWise Yukon in search of information about how human-wildlife conflict can be prevented.

Finally, private businesses are getting involved; they are offering new products and contacting WildWise Yukon to learn more about how they can provide better and more effective solutions. As we continue to facilitate these emerging partnerships and opportunities, the community has been responding with tangible enthusiasm.

WildWise Yukon is looking forward to continuing our work of facilitating this exciting shift in the way we view and prevent negative human-wildlife encounters in the Yukon. Our YFWET funding has played a critical role in ensuring our capacity to build such a high degree of local support for a solution-oriented approach to preventing conflicts. As interest increases in our work, we hope to continue receiving support from the YFWET in order to maintain and build both this momentum and our capacity to channel it.

Partnering Organizations: New and Stronger Connections

The Agriculture Branch of the Yukon Government was in touch early in 2015 to explore potential opportunities for collaboration when it comes to attractant management in the agriculture industry. Remy Rodden, manager of Environmental Education and Youth Programs at Environment Yukon has expressed interest in exploring potential opportunities for collaboration when it comes to developing content for teachers to use in the classroom.

The Director of Education and Programming at the Wildlife Preserve has indicated interest in future collaboration, particularly around the information they present regarding their new fox. The Wildlife Preserve asked WildWise Yukon for feedback on the information panel they are developing for their fox enclosure, as they wanted to include information around drivers of human-fox conflicts. They also indicated interest in future collaboration to incorporate human-wildlife conflict messaging into their education programming.

We are also keeping in touch with the Northern Safety Network regarding opportunities to improve and expand the impact of their bear safety course.

Yukon College and City of Whitehorse: Emerging Local Leaders

Scott Gilbert from Yukon College contacted WildWise Yukon to collaborate on projects that he has recently initiated at Yukon College. A new bear aware brochure for college residents is being developed by students that will incorporate some information about WildWise Yukon. WildWise Yukon will also be providing feedback on a report produced by Scott and one of his students that evaluates the risk of student-bear interactions and the opportunities to reduce potential conflicts. Discussions are currently underway regarding future collaboration and opportunity to involve Yukon College students in the work that we do.

Following council's support for addressing and reducing human-wildlife conflict in the City of Whitehorse during the spring and fall CASM, one of the councillors requested that WildWise Yukon provide suggestions for reducing human-wildlife conflict. Consequently, we have been asked to review their new curbside recycling pickup system that the City is in the midst of designing. The City has also dedicated a staff person's time (0.5 days a week) toward chairing and participating in a newly formed Bear Working Group, which currently has representation from the city, Environment Yukon and WildWise Yukon.

Media: Facilitating Public Awareness

Social Media

WildWise Yukon is enjoying the growth of its online followers, though the impact that the organization has had on social media goes beyond regular followers of our page. Activity on our page has peaked in times of negative human-wildlife encounters, correlated with the number of people who have chosen to "Like" our Facebook page.

Following our most successful post to date on August 7th, 2014 (see left), we reached an unprecedented 9,246 people on Facebook in response to a bear-alert following the sighting of a black bear in the downtown Whitehorse area. There were 481 likes, comments and shares associated with this post, many of them made by people who were not following the WildWise Yukon Facebook page at the time.

The following table provides a summary of some of the wildlife sighting and/or conflict alerts from our Facebook page over the last year. We now reach on average between 100 - 300 people within Southern Yukon with our postings to the Facebook site.

In addition to these statistics, we have also received appreciation through word-of-mouth from community members that have received this information from WildWise Yukon via social media at a time when it was needed most.

Regular Media

The media is now contacting WildWise Yukon directly for comments on how human-wildlife conflicts can prevented as these conflicts hit the news. Links to media stories that have referred to WildWise Yukon in 2014-2015 are provided in the Appendix, and made available on our website.

Local Business Community: Stepping up to the Plate

It was recognized that there was a direct need to help ensure that affordable materials and ready-made and available solutions to prevent conflict with wildlife be made available in Yukon stores and communities. Following conversations with local businesses we are now beginning to see wildlife conflict prevention products available to Yukon residents (e.g. bear-resistant containers. For example, staff at Home Hardware have indicated they will be ordering new electric fencing equipment this coming spring. After bringing the WildWise Yukon brochure to the Geoscience forum, Hurlbert Enterprises requested us to replenish their stock in order to continue displaying it with their bear deterrent and electric fencing equipment.

The Feedstore & Pet Junction, following conversations facilitated by WildWise Yukon with Margo Supplies, is ordering electric fencing equipment that will be more diverse and appropriate for use in the Yukon. The Feedstore now displays and stocks bear resistant polycarts for sale to the general public, thereby providing conflict prevention solutions for Yukon homeowners. They have already provisioned Champagne and Aishihik First Nation with 100 such polycarts to address issues with bears in one of their communities. For the coming spring, the Feedstore is planning to actively promote and advertise these bins as a safe place to store feed, as well as electric fencing equipment so that people can not only protect their investments, but reduce human-wildlife conflict. Future educational opportunities will continue to grow with agricultural partners thanks to our efforts to foster this relationship with the FeedStore and other local business owners.

Northern Environmental Management Systems contacted WildWise Yukon to show us their new BearSaver bins which they had shipped up for demonstration. This initiated a conversation between WildWise Yukon and the company about the strengths and weaknesses of this particular bin design for various uses (eg. Urban curbside vs. Rural residential). Opportunities for the private sector to supply products and services that would help to address human-wildlife conflict in the Yukon were also discussed.

Project Activities:

What activities did you complete during your project?

1. Demonstration of Non-Lethal Deterrence and Passive-Management Techniques

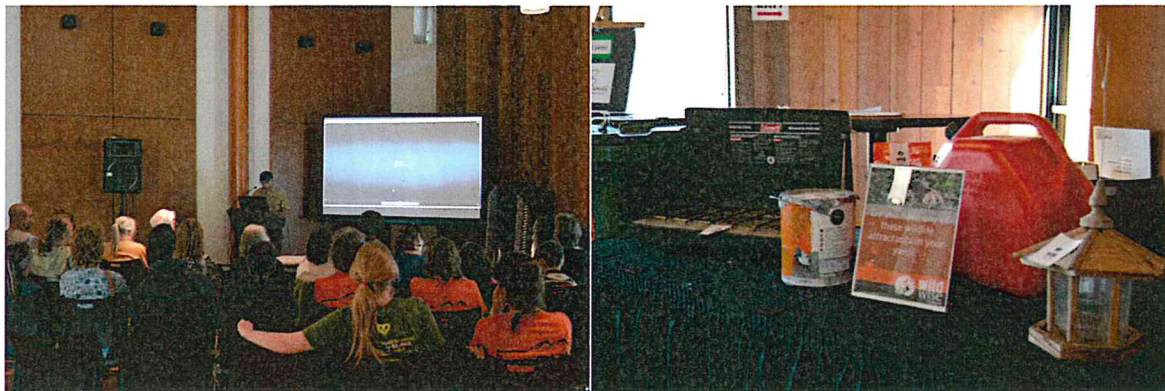

- a. We purchased demo-kit equipment, portable electric fencing, and fox deterrents to be used for demonstration and display (eg. the Fireweed Community Market, trade show, Parks Day etc.). Through demonstration of these products, the Yukon public will learn about techniques for reducing negative human-wildlife encounters; and we hope that Yukoners will take an active role in attractant management and become 'wildwise' at their homes and/or businesses.

2. Hosted a Wildlife Appreciation Event in Whitehorse:

- a. We hosted our first Wildlife Appreciation Event in May, 2014 at the Kwanlin Dun Cultural Centre. We invited local like-minded organizations to arrange informative displays for this event. Additionally, WildWise Yukon hosted an art competition and displayed all entries at this event, and provided participatory educational activities and a public talk/slide show by Phil Timpany. We raised over $3,000.00 from an on-line auction initiative that showcased Phil's stunning wildlife photo. The event also included a silent auction, which fostered participation and support from local and Canadian organizations to raise money to help prevent negative human-wildlife encounters in the Yukon. The artwork that was submitted as a part of the 'Living with Yukon Wildlife' art contest was later displayed at a Yukon Arts Centre, allowing for increased exposure of our WildWise Yukon message and educational outreach.

3. Educational Outreach:

- a. We purchased and distributed a significant amount of public education material from The Get Bear Smart Society<sup>1</sup> (www.bearsmart.com) that focused on bear biology and behavior and was geared towards youth to promote stewardship and co-existence with bears. These educational outreach materials were distributed at our fundraising activities and at community outreach events along with our written brochures and advice. These events included our Wildlife Appreciation Event and the weekly Fireweed Community Markets in August and September.

How did your activities contribute to your goals and objectives?

Reducing negative human-wildlife encounters by managing wildlife attractants and appropriate land use planning is a goal that many communities would benefit from and we are committed to assist them in achieving this goal.

Our projects were focused on engaging the Yukon public and providing the best available educational materials and tools to prevent conflict with wildlife in their homes, businesses, and communities. We completed our goal of creating educational demo kits to help spread awareness and knowledge around the use of passive electric fencing and deterrent strategies that have successfully reduced conflict in other jurisdictions. We continued to build engagement and enthusiasm for addressing human-wildlife conflict in Yukon communities by hosting a successful Wildlife Appreciation Event and attending local Fireweed and community market events.

Our projects contribute towards the objective of achieving conservation in management of wildlife resources and their habitats (UFA 16.1.1.1.). Our outreach programs and educational materials are based on the best available training and scientific information. We have future collaborative initiatives that will continue to utilize the educational material and the demonstration kits that we expect will reach a large Yukon audience, and promote a safe living environment for both wildlife and people (UFA 16.1.1.8).

What effects did your activities have or will have on the welfare of fish, wildlife and/or their habitat?

These projects will have indirect benefits to wildlife in the Yukon. Short-term benefits from our projects include less wildlife being relocated and/or eradicated due to having accessed human attractants in their environment due to increased vigilance and efforts by local people to prevent wildlife from accessing human food, garbage, and other attractants. In the long-term we hope to see a culture-shift from one where such animals are viewed as 'nuisance' and 'pests', to one where non-lethal management options are more widely implemented, and greater co-existence with wildlife populations is achieved in Yukon communities.

Through this targeted and sustained education we recognize the inevitability of people starting to use fencing and other non-lethal mitigation methods in conjunction with better overall management of attractants. We believe that our ongoing educational efforts help to foster an understanding that will help reduce the number of negative human-wildlife encounters and the re-location and destruction of wildlife.

Explain how the results of your work contributed to the protection, enhancement or restoration of fish, wildlife or their habitat?

As stated in our introduction at the beginning of this report, we feel as though we have increased the awareness of how to manage wildlife attractants by providing current educational material purchased from Bear Smart Society and provided by our own local experts.

Communications:

WildWise Yukon provides feedback and advice to the City of Whitehorse, the territorial government, and funding bodies through regular communications and reports. Copies of all our educational materials are made available to the public both on our website and in local businesses and government sites. We provide these materials to whomever wishes to receive and distribute them free of cost.

WildWise Yukon specifically recognizes the important contribution of the Enhancement Trust on our website, and in our Annual Progress Report made available on our website. Recognition was also given to the Trust in all our media and advertising for the Wildlife Appreciation Event and the Art Competition (see attached copies of these posters and our thank you advertisement in Appendix B) and both visually and verbally at these events.

We promoted the Wildlife Appreciation Event in regular media using both radio and print advertisements and news releases. Our Program Coordinator was invited to speak on CBC Radio's A New Day to promote both the Wildlife Appreciation Event and the Art Competition. Over 100 posters were printed and distributed to communities throughout the Southern Lakes for the event, and all Whitehorse schools were provided with Art contest information for teachers and students. All events were promoted online using social media and event websites; What's Up Yukon, Northwestel Community TV, and our website.

We received over 80 walk-ins throughout the day at this educational event, 40 submissions to our art contest, and just under 30 people for the free evening talk and slideshow with Phil Timpany. A paid thank-you advertisement was placed in the Yukon News following the Wildlife Appreciation Event and art contest (see above). All photos of the event were posted as an album that is publicly available on our Facebook page.

Following our event, hundreds of additional people were reached by attending the weekly Fireweed Community Markets in the months of August and September. We highly recommend attending even bi-weekly market sessions to continue with wildlife education and/or outreach in the future.

Applicant Suggestions

One lesson we learned was the amount of time and resources planning an event like the Wildlife Appreciation Event takes for a small non-profit. While we consider this event to have been a success, we would likely partner with an established organization in the future to host similar events, both to increase turnout and to alleviate the workload. We would also recommend that future educational events be planned so that they occur in the early spring or fall, as summer appeared to be a busy time of year to host this kind of event.

All interactions and communications with the staff of the Trust were professional and prompt. While we did have issues initially in updating our mailing address with past YFWET records, staff at the Trust worked quickly to ensure that all necessary steps were taken to help streamline our funding process and rectify this. We appreciate the advice and feedback that the Trust and its staff have provided to our growing organization and hope to continue working with them to reach our goals.

A key finding from our efforts to date is the requirement to continue to provide and expand our educational programming. As a young organization we continue to build both our recognition and reputation in the community. We expect there will be a continued need to provide face to face interactions and education in order to see the long-term changes in human behavior to reduce negative encounters between humans and wildlife in the Yukon.

Based on our experience and feedback provided by local residents future needs include further investigation into the various causes for conflict with specific species in Yukon communities (e.g. red fox in the downtown core vs. bears in the greenbelts surrounding the city). Different communities have different issues, and we believe that conducting bear hazard assessments or door-to-door educational outreach canvassing can address specific concerns around human-wildlife conflicts.
